

BIOCREW INVEST: connecting with investment peers

“ The eHealth HUB platform is undoubtedly a connector [...] and has allowed me to interact with other investors by having access to their contact. ”

My challenges

- Lack of time to review the multitude of initiatives that are launched
- There is not yet a real methodology for the analysis of companies from a financial point of view to improve valuations and investments and the dispersion of HUBs (everybody has one)
- Another of the fundamental problems in the sector is the lack of transfer of many European projects. Innovation without transfer is money for nothing.

eHealth HUB Platform.

“The platform is undoubtedly a connector among all those HUBS that aspire to position themselves and has allowed me to interact with other investors by having access to their contact. The amount of data and followers it has now is just incredible.

However, it would be good to evolve from a static repository to a dynamic and predictive platform that puts in contact groups of people that have a common need.

On the financing of projects, the fact is that most of the operations carry co-investment strategies, so the platform could foster this interaction and pair investors.”

The company

Biocrew aims to be a network of private investors with the goal of boosting entrepreneurial and investment activity linked to life sciences and technology. It seeks investment opportunities in the field of biotechnology, medical devices and digital health for professional, non-professional and corporate investors.

Learning points ●

“If we want to compete with the market leader (USA) and other powerful markets (some regions in ASIA) we should think in Europe as a whole, especially if the UK leaves the Union. The eHealth HUB platform helps in this endeavor by providing a European catalogue.”
